

AASMAAN Foundation Trust is a non-profitable organization formed with a purpose to empower persons with disabilities by three individual friends. The NGO primarily emphasis to raise social awareness and support Persons with disability for health care support, education, recreational activities and livelihood support.

On international disability day, we are releasing an inclusive cover;

Olangal is a volunteer-driven project conceptualized by the team of Aasmaan Foundation Trust. We are releasing an inclusive cover on Sri Ilayaraj YouTube channel. We are trying to creating a movement through the project. A couple of star celebrities will be sharing the same.

We hand-picked these participants based on their singing passion more than focusing on their disability. We had a set of limitations to capture these videos because of the pandemic. The audio recording was done in the studio for most of them. They were excited to experience studio recording for the first time. We hope this video conveys the importance of inclusion, equality and how we can celebrate our lives despite the imperfections.

The song visuals and vocals are performed by persons with different disabilities from different parts of India. All of them are very passionate about music and are professional in their humble way. We have two participants (PWDz) from Kochi, one from Malappuram and one from Ghaziabad. Two volunteers who are part of the visuals are from Chennai and the USA.

We request you to help our story reach out to the media.
